

Abelia 'Raspberry Profusion'

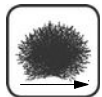

An abundant flowering and double impact through its flamboyant raspberry sepals.

'Raspberry Profusion' is generously covered with big clusters of strongly scented pink flowers with flamboyant raspberry sepals from May to September. Its decorative interest continues up to the end of autumn because of the attractive coloured sepals that remain when the flowers fall. The pretty, brilliant green foliage mostly falls in winter. The small shrub is compact and resists both heat and drought.

Characteristics

0.90 /
1.20 m

0.90 /
1.20 m

06 – 11

Scent

-15°C

Resistant to drought

Season(s) of interest

Spring

Summer

Autumn

Selected by

University of Georgia Research
Foundation Inc.

Edition

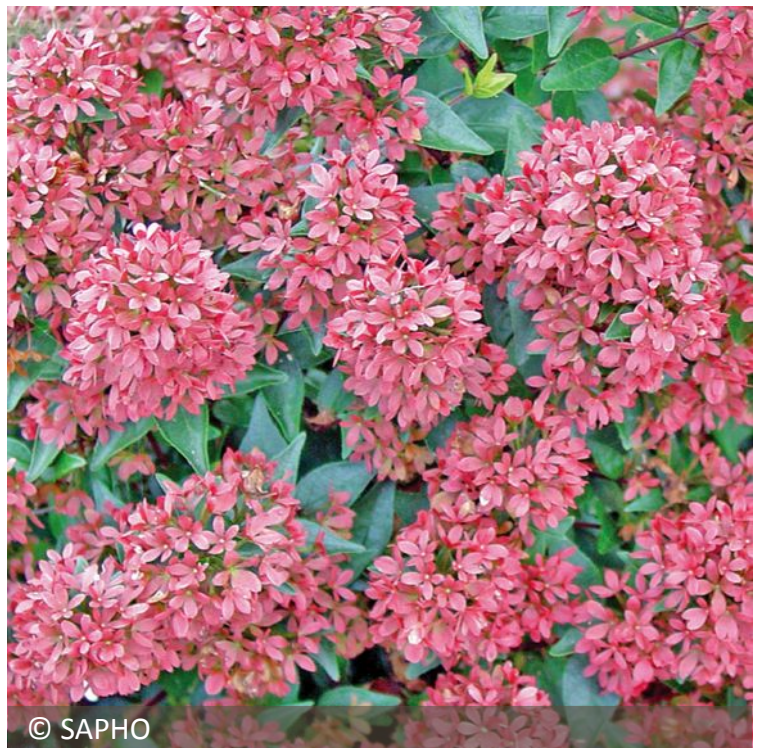

SAPHO

European P.B.R.

European plant variety protection

© SAPHO

© SAPHO

